Glow the firefly found a giant, juicy blueberry. It was almost as big as she was! “Mine, all mine!” she cheered.

Pip the little mouse tiptoed over. His tummy rumbled. “May I have a taste, please?” “No! Mine!” said Glow, and she flew away.

Glow hid behind a big blue flower and nibbled. It was yummy. But there was nobody to giggle with, and she felt a little lonely.

Finn the fox found Pip sitting all alone. “What is wrong?” asked Finn. “Glow will not share,” sniffled Pip.

High above, Glow heard every word. She looked at her blueberry. Then she looked down at Pip. She felt a funny tug in her heart.

Finn waved up at her. “Sharing is more fun, Glow!” Her light flickered. “You are right,” she said softly.

Glow broke her blueberry into three big pieces.
One for Pip. One for Finn. One for Glow.
“Thank you, Glow!” “Sweet, sweet, sweet!”

Glow’s light shone brighter than ever. “Sharing makes everything taste better,” she said. And they all giggled together.
