Cotton the sheep had two little lambs—snow-white Lulu and her brother, Patch. Cotton loved them both very much.

Patch was big and strong. At feeding time, he rushed to Mama, pushing little Lulu aside. Poor Lulu hardly got a chance to drink her milk.

But Lulu didn't stay sad for long. She ran, jumped, skipped, and hopped across the meadow all day! . Though other big sheep get annoyed sometimes but they loved lulu.

Lulu didn't get much milk, so she learned to nibble grass, leaves, and other food.

One day, Lulu saw a little rabbit crying over its lost carrot.
"Why are you so happy?" asked the rabbit.
Lulu smiled. "I just am!"

"Come on! Jump with me!" said Lulu.
The rabbit jumped. Then a little goat joined in. Soon, even some lambs were jumping too!

At night, when Lulu missed her mom the most, she would come to snuggle and sleep beside her. But Patch would drive Lulu away from their mother.

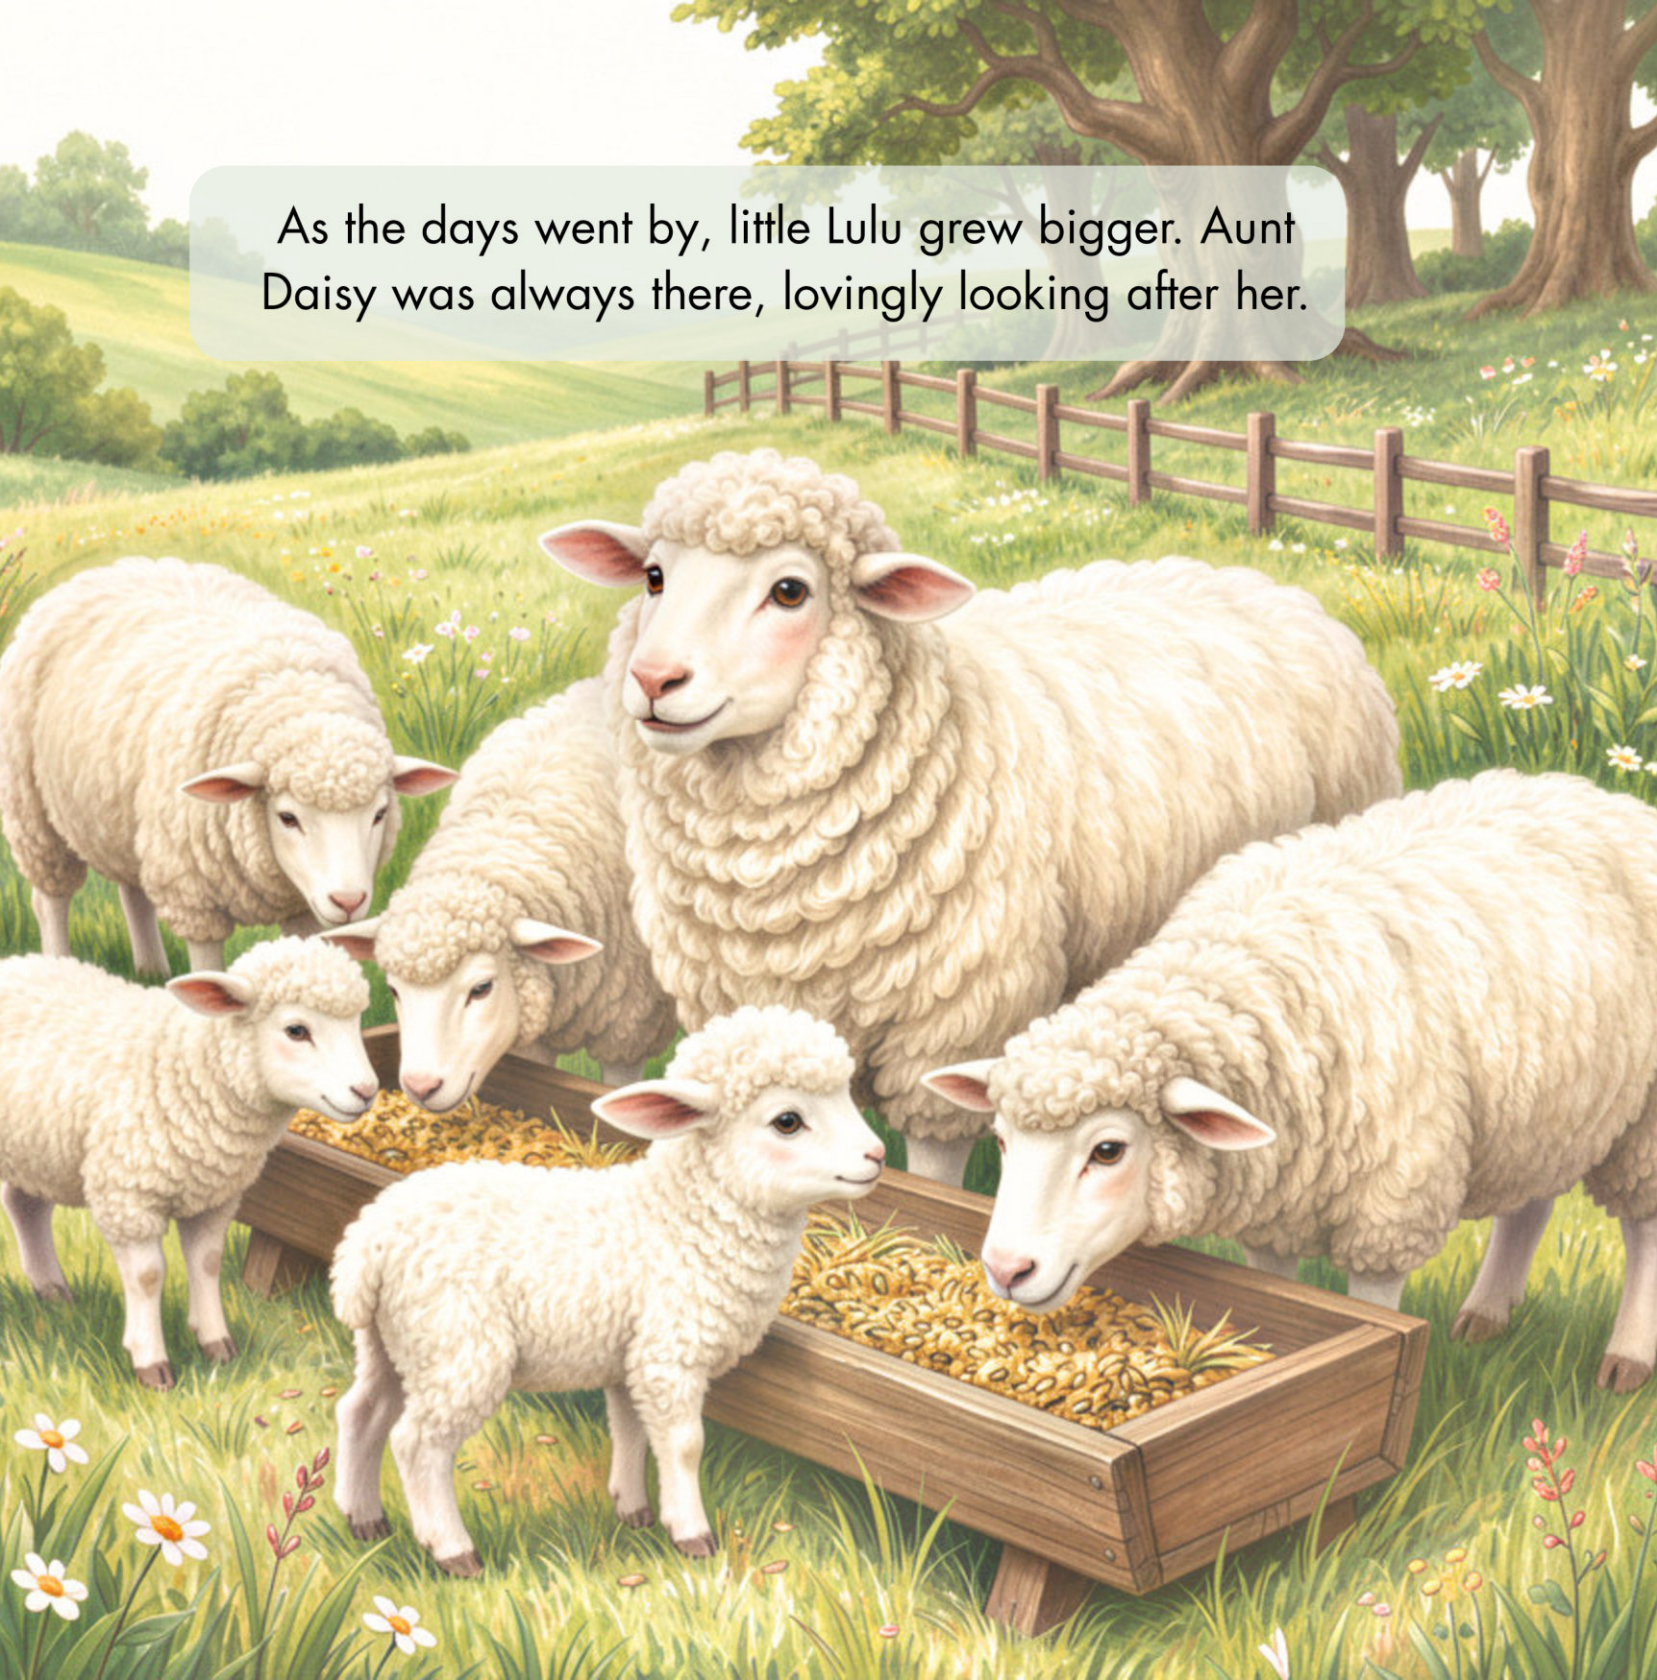

Lulu quietly cuddled up beside Aunt Daisy, who snuggled her close. Seeing Lulu cry, Daisy began telling her a story.

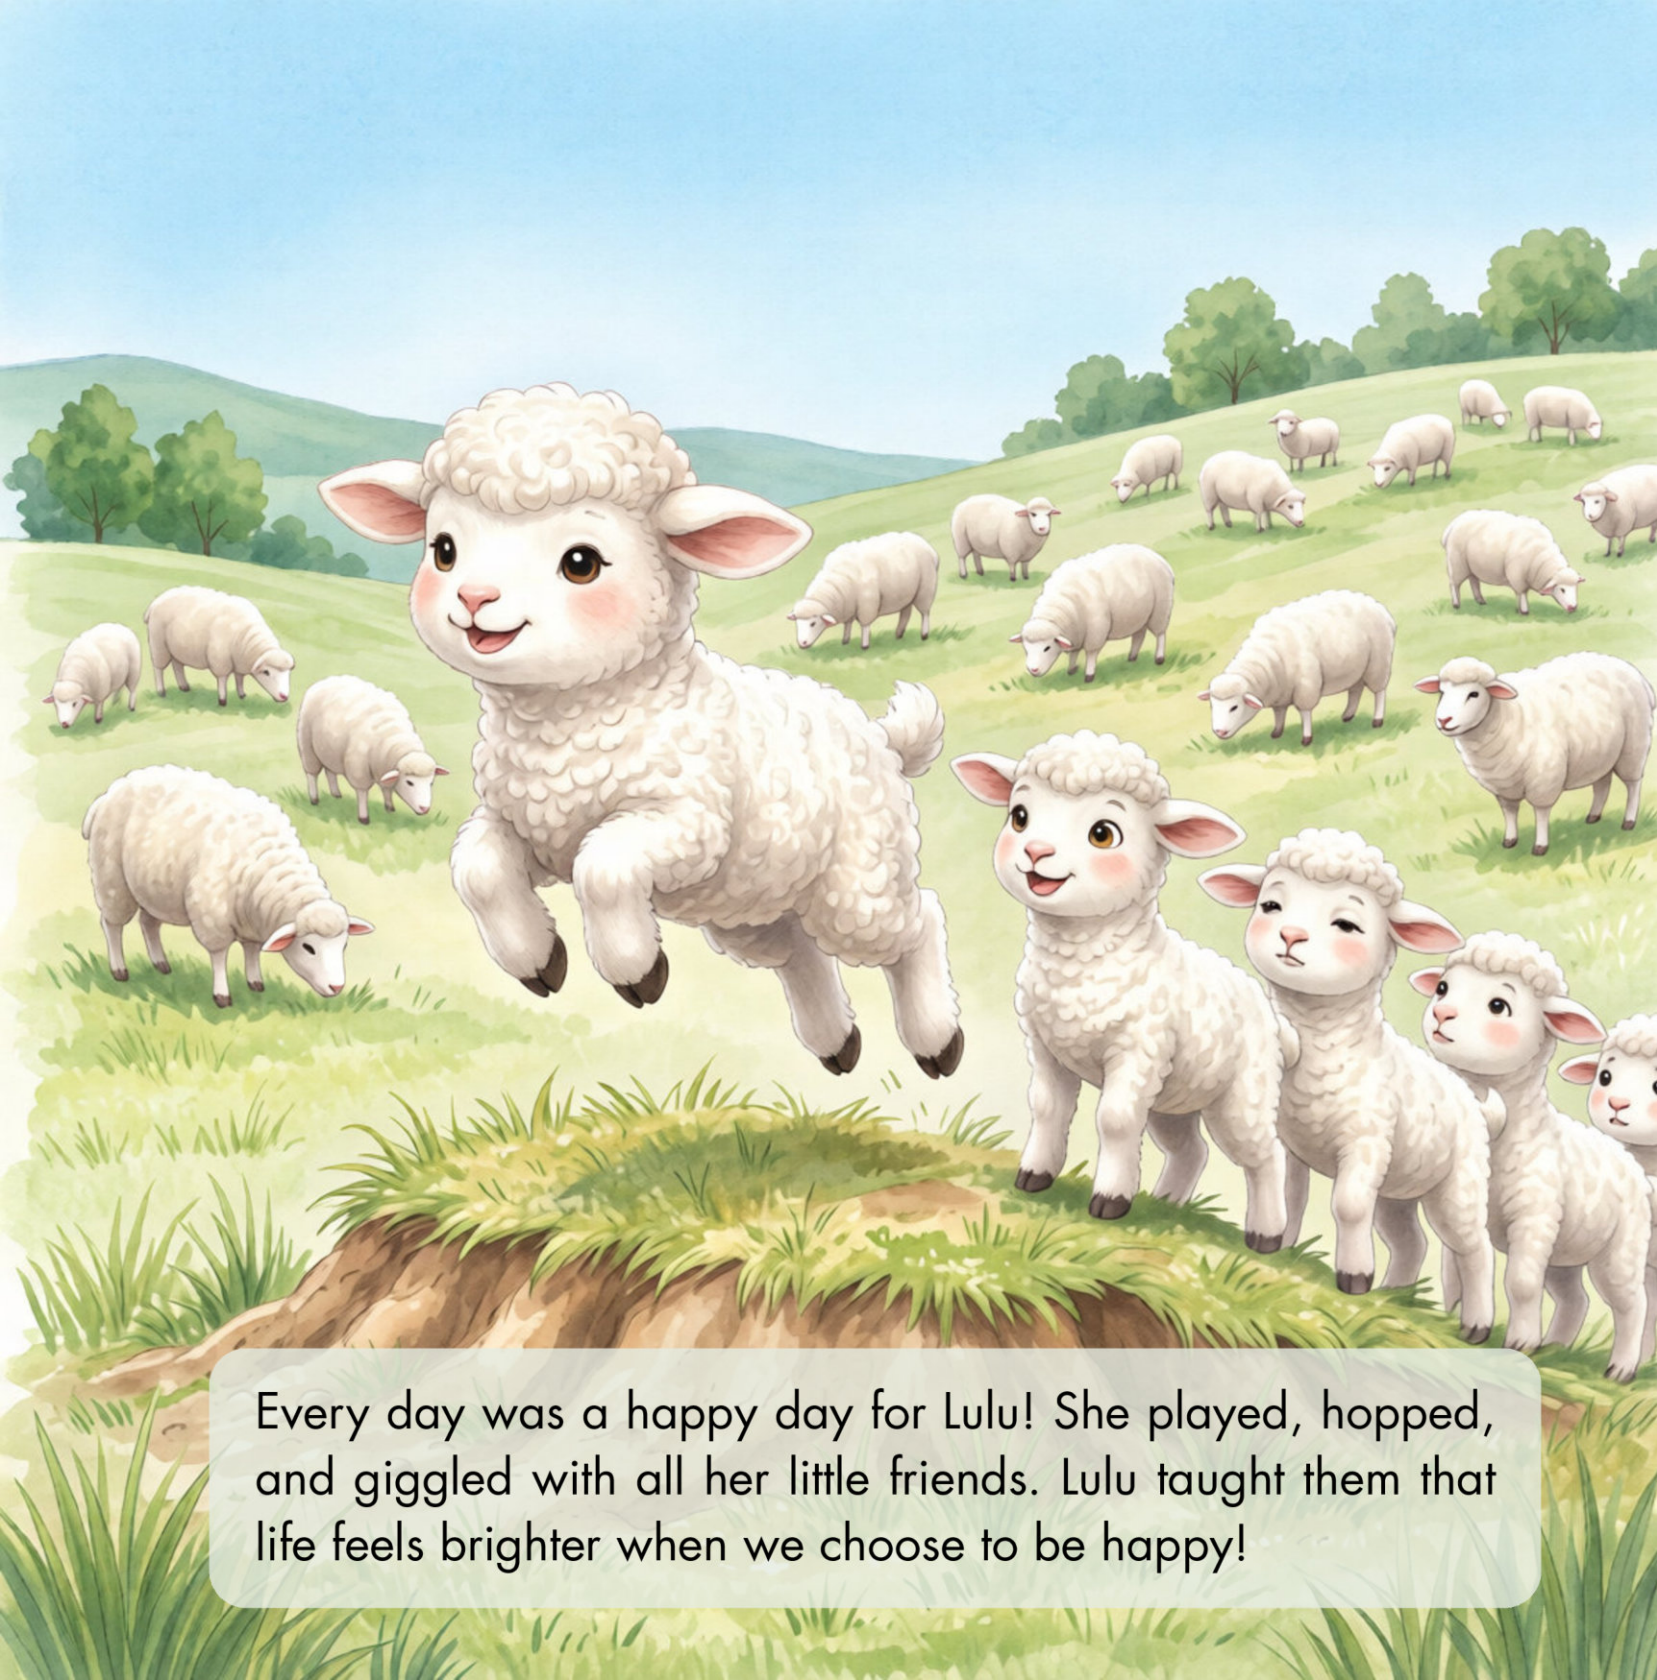

"One night, a sneaky fox crept toward the lambs!" Aunt Daisy whispered. "But all the sheep gathered together and chased it away. The fox never dared to return!" All the sheep listened eagerly, and Lulu soon drifted off to sleep.

As the days went by, little Lulu grew bigger. Aunt Daisy was always there, lovingly looking after her.

Little by little, Lulu grew stronger, too. And when Patch tried to keep her away from Mama, brave little Lulu stood her ground!

Every day was a happy day for Lulu! She played, hopped, and giggled with all her little friends. Lulu taught them that life feels brighter when we choose to be happy!

The little lamb found its way, bringing joy to every day.
